

CS5
A141a1

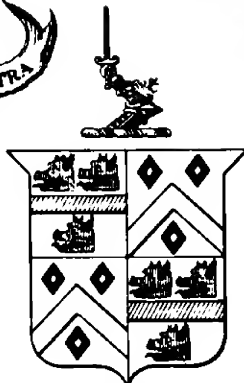

Abell
(Essex)

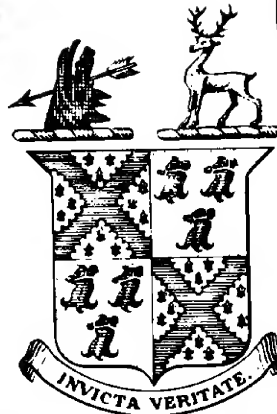

Abell
(Derby)

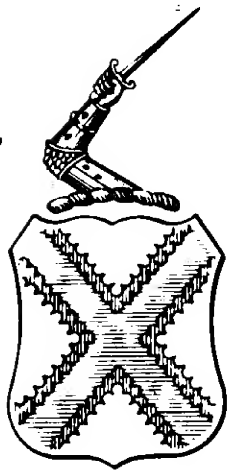

Abell
(Kent)

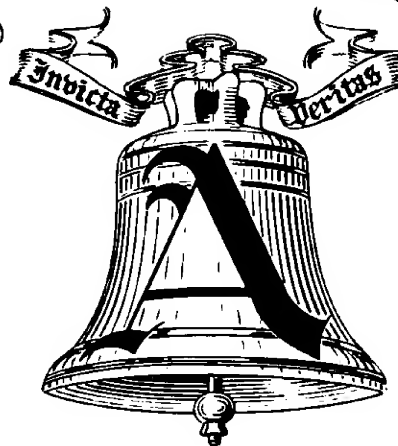

Abell
(Fordham)

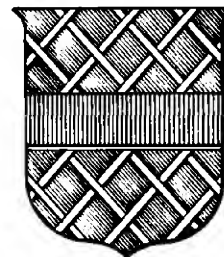

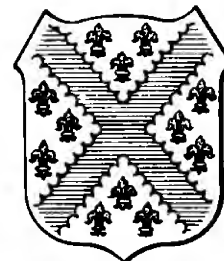

A. Abell,
Esq.

Abell
(Kent & London)

"On the wall of his prison in the Tower, during his confinement, Abell carved the device of a bell with the letter A on it. This memorial remains"
Dictionary of National Biography, Vol. I.
See also, The Encyclopaedia Britannica, 11th Ed'n.

Abell

Copy for central figures by
Horace Avery Abell.
Essex Motto & Fordham Crest by Arthur Hammond Abell.

Red	Purple	Blue
Green	Black	Gold

Compiled and Drawn by
Lewis Parker Abell.
Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 1917.
Washington, D.C., Aug. 1918.

Reduced photo of drawing in Lib'y of Congress.

Heraldry

1

June 6th, 1921.

American Antiquarian Society,
Mr. Clarence S? Brigham, Librarian,
Worcester, Mass.

Dear Sir :-

In response to your inquiry of May 26th, I take pleasure in enclosing as a donation to your society a photograph copy of the Abell coat-of-arms drawing referred to. The original of this drawing was filed for record and preservation in the Library of Congress, at Washington, D.C., about two years ago. It is about 8 x 10 inches in dimensions. I believe copies of the same, probably full size, may be obtained at a charge to cover cost, by addressing the Librarian of Congress, and if my permission should be required, this letter may be forwarded for that purpose.

There was also filed for record in the Library of Congress in October 1919, a typewritten copy of the Abell Family Genealogy, by Horace Avery Abell, of Rochester, N.Y., and myself. Additional data and records are being supplied from time to time and when the same reaches a point of approximate completion, it will be printed and issued in regular book form. A copy of the same has also been filed in the N.Y., Bio. & Gen. Soc. Library in New York and in the State Educational Bldg., Albany, N.Y., by Mr. H. A. Abell, where I suppose you may find them available for reference, in case you may be interested in this part of the work. This work includes the branch of the family which located at Goshen, Mass., about 1760, as described in Barrus' History of Goshen, and will soon include several lines of said branch which are now about completed. If you have any records or data on your shelves pertaining to any branches of our family lines we would be pleased to be so advised.

Very truly yours,

L. P. Abell